

Dear FCC,

I am a subscriber to the XM Radio service. I travel by car for business frequently; often in areas where traditional AM/FM signals are weak or non-existent. The ability to receive traffic and weather conditions via XM would be very helpful.

More importantly, as a subscriber, I pay for the services XM offers. It seems more than unfair to attempt to limit their ability to broadcast, and my ability to hear, traffic and weather conditions and other locally oriented programming. Satellite TV now delivers local channels, why is this any different?

As a subscriber who is happy to pay for the quality and diversity of programming that XM offers, I urge you to reject HR 4026.

Thank You,

William Prappas
